

COALITION for RESOURCE RECOVERY

Eliminate waste.
Harvest assets.
Make money.

Global Green USA's Coalition for Resource Recovery (CoRR) is an industry working group dedicated to combating climate change and generating business value by transforming waste into assets. CoRR conducts pilots and related research to identify and accelerate development of scalable, transferable waste diversion programs and technologies.

GOALS

CoRR aims to find national solutions for resource and asset recovery. We will facilitate 70% waste diversion in targeted urban markets by 2020 to further national recovery solutions. By working with the accommodation, retail, and food service sectors, CoRR specifically seeks to:

- Divert 6 million tons of waste per year, with potential of $256 million dollars in savings to businesses and municipalities
- Reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 16 million tons annually
- Influence the design of packaging and recycling systems throughout the world

PROCESS

CoRR works with private companies as well as cities to maximize waste diversion and resource recovery. Currently we work with over two dozen member organizations, as well as the cities of New York, Washington, DC, and New Orleans to:

- Conduct pilots and bring successful models to scale
- Evaluate environmental and financial performance of programs and technologies and disseminate objective, third-party reports of results
- Apprise the public, city, and businesses of progress toward waste diversion, cost savings, and greenhouse gas reduction goals
- Promote effective technologies and programs

INITIATIVES

Foodservice Packaging: Develop cost-effective systems to recycle food service packaging into valuable, high-quality materials.

Wholesale Food Packaging: Replace non-recyclable wax-coated wholesale transfer packaging with recyclable alternatives.

Food Waste: accelerate the development of a reliable, environmentally sound, and economical commercial food waste recovery infrastructure.
