

Recyclable Coated Produce Boxes: Save Green by Going Green

Produce and meat are often shipped in boxes coated with wax, which renders them unrecyclable.

*This results in the landfilling and burning of 1.36 million tons of valuable fiber every year, costing restaurateurs and grocers $57 million nationwide.

*Global Green USA supports the development, use, and recycling of Fibre Box Association certified recyclable and repulpable produce packaging to reduce waste and save money.

Global Green USA's Coalition for Resource Recovery (CoRR) is an industry working group dedicated to combating climate change by turning waste into assets. CoRR seeks to accelerate the development and deployment of recyclable coated produce packaging by:

- Highlighting and promoting recyclable packaging success stories and the innovative brands involved,
- Facilitating education and outreach concerning the economic and ecological benefits of using recyclable packaging, and
- Documenting pilot projects for new recyclable products.

Eliminate Waste. Harvest Assets. Make Money.

CoRR Wholesale Packaging Program Highlights

- Promoted and highlighted the conversion of the largest poultry packing facility in the US to 100% recyclable boxes.
- Hosted tours to major growing regions to bring coating developers, box makers and farmers together to find solutions to replace wax-coated packaging with recyclable alternatives.
- Hosted conferences to bring together key stakeholders to identify strategies to promote the use of recyclable packaging.
